RareBooksClub. Paperback. Book Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. Paperback. 22 pages. Original publisher: Cleveland, OH : Army Research Laboratory, NASA-Glenn Research Center, 2009 OCLC Number: (OCoLC)546918206 Subject: Gas-lubricated bearings. Excerpt: . . . areas of fine surface polishing. Measurements with a micrometer confirmed the absence of any diametric changes in the PS304 coating. Figure 6. Bearing after 100 start-stop cycles showing removal of soft polymer from top foils. Figure 7. PS304 coated journal after 100 start-stop cycles. No spallation or delamination is evident. A plot of the temperature results from the simulated wind milling test is shown in figure 8. The test was performed with a 266.9 N load and 3 krpm journal speed, which is half of the bearings lift-off speed. Therefore, the PS304 coating was in direct sliding contact with the bearings top foils throughout the entire test. Again, the frictional heating caused a small, non-uniform increase in the bearings temperature after sliding for 10 min, which suggests that thermal loading under this condition is not a concern. At the beginning of the test the bearings bulk temperature was 82 F, but at the tests conclusion the temperatures were approaching steady-9 This item ships from La Vergne,TN. Paperback.
