We shall be the less disposed to come. Egmont. Then war is declared; arid we are rebels. Do not suffer prudence to mislead you, Orange. I know it is not fear that makes you yield. Consider this step. Orange. I have considered it. Egmont. Consider for what you are answerable if you are wrong. For tho most fatal war that ever yet desolated it country. With a single nod you will excite to the direst confusion what, with patient effort, wo have so long kept in abeyance. But towards you, carried downwards by the stream, shall float the corpses of citizens, of children, of maidens, till, aghast with horror, you shall no longer know whose cause you are defending, since you shall see those, for whose liberty you drew the sword, perishing around you. And what will be your emotions when conscience whispers, It was for my own safety that I drew it ?...
