No more appropriate body, it seems to me, could be found than the members of the N. W. Branch, to whom, upon a time, Uncle Sam owed a continuance of his existence. The trip in question was made by the National Board of Soldiers Homes, under instructions from Congress to proceed to the Pacific Coast, and select a site for a National Branch somewhere west of the Rocky Mountains. The point of rendezvous is Jersey City. On the evening of November 8th, 1887, we board the car St. Nicholas, which becomes our home on wheels for many a week. In it we speed, swifter than the flight of a migratory bird, across the continent. Our first halting place is the Central Branch at Dayton, Ohio - the mother institution, with its four thousand members. (Magic lantern view - Campus, Dayton.) This scene represents the campus at the moment of review. The sun shines bright. The band fills the air with exhilarating sounds.
